Michael B Ward* (wardm@wou.edu), Department of Mathematics, Western Oregon University, Monmouth, OR. What Is Studied In, Written For, and Remembered From Western Oregon University's Bridge Course. Preliminary report.

"Introduction to Proof" at Western Oregon University is a typical bridge course, where "typical" is based upon a nationwide survey of bridge that we reported at the 2007 JMM. We will briefly review those survey results. Furthermore, we will indicate how a "writing intensive" designation influences our course design. An overview of sequences of writing assignments will be included. Most importantly, we will report on the findings of a fall 2007 survey that attempts to determine what our students remember and use from our bridge course. We conclude with implications from the survey for the future direction of the course. (Received September 20, 2007)
